…achieved through internal growth and expansion. This process would occur outside the current Hart-Scott-Rodino Act (HSR) process, such that the dominant platforms would be required to report all transactions and no HSR deadlines would be triggered. Establishing this presumption would better reflect Congress's preference for growth through ingenuity and investment rather than through acquisition.

Imagine if news outlets were given permission to band together (currently forbidden under antitrust laws) and negotiate as a group with the big platforms for a cut of the money the platforms make off their reporting, rather than trying to negotiate piecemeal.

To address this imbalance of bargaining power, we recommend that the Subcommittee consider legislation to provide news publishers and broadcasters with a narrowly tailored and temporary safe harbor to collectively negotiate with dominant online platforms.

(This paragraph on the ways that big platforms tend to seep into all parts of whatever business they touch is very interesting, and leads to a call for structural separations and line of business limitations.)

Through using market power in one area to advantage a separate line of business, dominant firms undermine competition on the merits. By functioning as critical intermediaries that are also integrated across lines of business, the dominant platforms face a core conflict of interest. The surveillance data they collect through their intermediary role, meanwhile, lets them exploit this conflict with unrivaled precision. Their ability both to use their dominance in one market as negotiating leverage in another, and to subsidize entry to capture unrelated markets, have the effect of spreading concentration from one market into others, threatening greater and greater portions of the digital economy.

Finally, the heartbreaking experience of seeing a parent through a major illness has haunted me during COVID-19. My family was lucky enough to be with my dad when he died. You derive a little solace from that. I cannot imagine what COVID victims' families are feeling...

Now that Facebook has banned QAnon, reporters should stop ourselves from providing roadmaps to the far-right social networks where its most hardcore followers are migrating. Don't do the work for them.

It matters very little what facebook does after Nov 3; distrust of democracy has already been seeded.

Facebook's idea for a post-election "kill switch" underlines another fundamental error in its thinking about disinformation: These campaigns don't begin and end on November 3. They're built over time, trafficking in emotion and increased trust, in order to undermine not just the act of voting but the democratic process as a whole. When our information ecosystem gets flooded with highly salient junk that keeps us scrolling and commenting and angrily reacting, civil discourse suffers. Our ability to compromise suffers. Our willingness to see humanity in others suffers. Our democracy suffers. But Facebook profits.

I'm sorry, what does Amy Coney Barrett's "sizeable American family" have to do with her qualifications to serve as a Supreme Court Justice?

And while we're talking about respect, perhaps the GOP should condemn the sexualized attacks their followers are using against Sen. Harris

I've been monitoring the sexualized disinformation the GOP is using against Senator Harris since she accepted the nomination. I will not post it here because it is disgusting and immoral. It has no place in our politics. I'd really like it if Trump and Pence actively condemned it.

This is not on Putin or China. These are American leaders who still have the support of at least 40% of the country. That's horrifying.

Issue #3 focused on poll watchers. @wiczipedia talked about how the threat -- both perceived and real --of polling place violence and intimidation could impact voters: mailchi.mp/580c900d0085/8 ...

"There are two ways in which the actions of these groups can be effective," Charles Stewart of the MIT Election Lab told me. "One is by their actual physical presence. And the second one is by being worried about them."

When the president tells the Proud Boys, a white supremacist organization, to "stand by" and calls his poll watchers an "army," it implicitly creates the threat of violence on Election Day.

That perception itself could be enough to intimidate voters and lower turnout for groups who believe they'd be targeted.

"We know that Trump's language has an effect on how his supporters behave," said Nina Jankowicz, a disinformation researcher at the Wilson Center. She has acted as an international election observer in Russia and Georgia.

"If you're a Black or brown person listening to the debate, and you hear that Trump is encouraging his supporters to go and watch, and you're in a place where it is permitted to open carry at a polling station, ask yourself: Do you bring your kids to vote with you that day? Probably not. Do you maybe not vote at all or do you have to change your voting plan so that you are mitigating that risk? I think that is highly likely. The actual verbal threat is intimidation in my mind. It's something that an international mission would note in its pre-election assessment heading into this consequential election here in the United States."

Stewart suggested there may be less to worry about because groups like the Proud Boys often bark louder than they bite — and that aren't as many of them as people think there are.

"Think about this Proud Boys rally that was supposed to be in Boston a couple of weeks ago," he told me. "They had promised a crowd of 20,000 and 200 every word is either a gendered dogwhistle or a straight up gendered insult:

insufferable = the fact that she takes up space dominated by men is hard to bear power-hungry = women should not aspire to positions of power smug = how dare she use her intellect to defend herself

Misogyny is not equality. We don't see men's sexuality discussed as part and parcel of their work. We do not see them told to stay home or stay quiet. Their physical appearances are not appraised like ours are. Men could not endure for a minute what women endure for a lifetime.

What's so important about @Redistrict's keen observation here is that it reminds us of the reliability and integrity of the American electoral process. Democratic processes always have (and have always had) some degree of honest human error. And we always address it.

> Dave Wasserman @Redistrict and don't tell me that "power-hungry" isn't gendered. men are praised for seeking power, women are chastised for it.

I've recently had men tell me that (a) I shouldn't be allowed to vote (b) I'm an example of why sharia law is good and (c) I exemplify why women shouldn't govern

Oh, my darlings, for those of you claiming that this is "the same language that men use against each other" it categorically is not. This recent study shows how women in Congress are far more likely to recurved gendered abuse than their male counterparts

Hi Lisa. I'd like to talk to you about this if you're willing. I'm regularly the only woman in a room full of men, and I believe we need to call out men's bad behavior when we see it. We deserve to walk into a room & receive the same respect they do, not be sexualized & demeaned.

I've earned respect from plenty of people who know how to behave respectfully. So has Kamala Harris. At any rate, language like that lobbed at her has no place in public discourse, especially not coming from a white house adviser.

There's an entire movement online to demean Senator Harris based on her sexuality, calling her demeaning names and photoshopping her into sexual situations. But yeah, flaccid must hurt.

I've been recommending this same thing. Once they hit the platform, his tweets are RTed 1000s of times in the first few minutes. Many folks seeing that content won't see (or accept) the labels that get added. Only way to stop the cascades of disinfo is before the tweets post.

Listen. Just because high profile men get called out using some of these same words does not mean

The fact that an adviser to POTUS not only used these words, but doubled down on them is abhorrent. It is an attempt to further normalize what should no longer be happening in the United States of America in 2020. Unfortunately Senator Harris's experience is not unique.

Is that something you allow? Is that something you would be happy to watch her endure?*

If not, why are you saying such things to literal strangers on the internet?

The problem, of course, is that there are still far too many men who are happy to demean the women in their life and those in their periphery.

And once again- as your comments prove- you all are missing the point. The insults used against men, unlike the ones you lobbed at me, are not gendered.

And no, President Trump has not been called worse than the disgusting nicknames the right has given Senator Harris.

Little is known at present about the relationships between gender and bullying behaviour. The aim of the study was to examine whether gender and role (managerial/non-managerial) were related to the bullying experienced by women and men [in New Zealand]. An online survey collected data from 991 men and 1,421 women. The survey provided a definition of bullying and asked participants whether they had been bullied at work. Women were more likely than men to self-identify as having been bullied. Male employers, senior managers, middle managers, supervisor and peers bullied men and women about equally, whereas women bullied women far more than they bullied men. The largest group of bullies of women were female peers, who rarely bullied male peers, while male peers bullied both genders about equally. Female clients bullied female staff but almost never male staff; male clients bullied both men and women but the numbers were small.

An analysis of 2 million tweets by the think tank Demos reveals that male public figures are several times more likely than women to receive abuse on Twitter

The think-tank analysed 2,006,616 tweets over a two-week period that were sent to a selection of the most prominent and widely-followed public figures on Twitter

The study included celebrities, politicians, journalists and musicians — specifically chosen to ensure an equal number — roughly one million — were aimed at each gender

It'd be nice if you included links and not just cherry picked your data to support your argument. Also, I'm aware of at least one study Demos did concluding something very different. And again, we are discussing gendered and sexualized abuse, not just "abuse."

... appearance. Abuse against men [even though they receive a higher proportion of it] doesn't take form in attacking their physical apperance[s]
Where only women interpret insults against them sexist & where only they consider it a major problem, which it isn't

While gendered online harassment has received increased attention in academic and public debates, there is a lack of empirical studies examining gender differences in experiences with online harassment. Relying on two independent large-scale population surveys carried out in Norway, this article examines whether women experience more— and different—online harassment than men, to what extent different types of online harassment silence its targets, and whether there are gendered patterns in how online harassment works as a silencing mechanism. Analytically, we distinguish between different levels of severity of online harassment and what the harassment is directed toward. Contrary to popular expectations, we find that more men than women have experienced online harassment. The main reason is that men receive more comments directed at their opinions and attitudes; women and men are equally exposed to harassment directed toward group characteristics. However, targeted women are more likely than targeted men to become more cautious in expressing their opinions publicly. Furthermore, the gender differences increase as the harassment becomes more aggressive and directed toward group characteristics.

As someone who has studied the proliferation of disinformation & long argued that the West needed to pay more attention to what was going on in Russia's neighborhood, THE FRONT LINES OF THE INFO WAR, that these accounts have been allowed to proliferate SINCE 2013 is shocking.

This shows a lack of understanding of Russia's motives and more importantly and concerningly, an utter lack of care for users in these countries, for many of which Facebook is essentially the hompage to the Internet.

2 14 69

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia 17 Jan 2019

If I were rooting out these accounts at Facebook, I would start this effort by looking for pages connected to employees of Sputnik, RT, and other state-run news orgs. Apparently that didn't occur to FB until recently?

2 19 79

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia 17 Jan 2019

(Another note that belies Facebook's lack of understanding of this issue: in their release, they refer to Sputnik as "a news agency based in Moscow." 🤦)

First, the surfacing. This here is highly suspicious behavior. Especially when viewed in the context of a political campaign. Creative, anonymous, credibility-generating, somewhat plausible. Exactly how a professional would surface disinformation and potentially forgeries.

Bottom line: every individual little fact —every email, every detail mentioned in an email—must be verified when data is surfaced in such a suspicious way, not just one piece of information, say a photo. It appears that The New York Post did not do that here.

Also, the revealed emails are shared as image files, not in a file format that would contain header information and metadata. That makes it harder to analyze and verify the files.

meeting with exec from Burisma and that his son was using those meetings to get higher pay from Burisma ... aka using his office to enrich his son

From: Vadym Pozharskyi
<v.pozharskyi.ukraine@gmail.com>
Subject: Meeting for coffee?
Date: April 17, 2015 at 6:00:51 AM PDT
To: Hunter Biden <hbiden@rosemontseneca.com>

Dear Hunter, thank you for inviting me to DC and giving an opportunity to meet your father and spent some time together. It's realty an honor and pleasure. As we spoke yesterday evening, would be great to meet today for a quick coffee. What do you think? I could come to you office somewhere around noon or so, before or on my way to airport.

My 2 cents. If not when, candidates' emails/spouse's emails/colleagues' emails are hacked and dumped online, we ask ourselves hard questions before we cover it. And when we do, we put a big fat red box at the top that explains everything we know about the provenance of the leak.

Twitter said it would ban QAnon content associated with abuse back in July. Company also said it will reduce reach on platform.

Did a rudimentary search for accounts. Top result is a QAnon acct with half a million followers ¯_(ツ)_/¯

"Break In Case Of Bad Publicity For Democrats." Inside the case was a sledgehammer for smashing Twitter's servers.

"Red alert -- shut the servers down! Shut them all down!"

Dorsey ran downstairs and started smashing as many computers as he could, but he did need to ask for some help, as the hammer was pretty heavy. None of the programmers could lift the hammer, either. Eventually, they managed to program a robot to pick up the sledgehammer and smash the servers.

This is why the Senate Intelligence Committee issued this recommendation in Vol. 5 of its bipartisan Russia report (page 935): twitter.com/washingtonpost ...

(U) Campaigns should notify FBI of all foreign offers of assistance, and all staff should be made aware of this expectation. In order to not encourage, or amplify, foreign influence efforts, campaigns should reject the use of foreign origin material, especially if it has potentially been obtained though the violation of U.S. law.

Just wondering: has the Kremlin disinformation machine injected the color-revolution-against-Trump theme into the US right wing media ecosystem?

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia 9월 18일

From what I can tell this isn't trickling over from overt propaganda like RT, seems to be more a symptom of conspiracy theory galaxy brain (Soros is also involved in this narrative, of course). Best performing content over the past few months comes from US outlets/commentators

No, @thedailybeast, this is NOT new. The laptop Derkach is discussing does NOT include any evidence to support accusations against the Bidens. It was presented last month during a press conference in Kyiv. I've seen the info he claims it holds; nothing verifiable there.

> The Daily Beast @thedailybeast
> Andrii Derkach jumped into the fray even as Giuliani shrugged off concerns that his latest smears against the Biden family may be fueled by a foreign election interference plot.

The New York Post's front page article about Hunter Biden was written mostly by reporter who refused to put his name on it because he had concerns over the article's credibility. As deadline approached, editors pressed other staff members to add their bylines to the story. 💣

Just wondering: has the Kremlin disinformation machine injected the color revolution against Trump theme into the US right wing media ecosystem?

From what I can tell this isn't trickling over from overt propaganda like RT, seems to be more a symptom of conspiracy theory galaxy brain (Soros is also involved in this narrative, of course). Best performing content over the past few months comes from US outlets/commentators

Friendly Monday morning reminder that there are plenty of people who know Ukraine and US Ukraine policy better than the people who came up with a hot take on it around this time last year, tucked it away in February, and conveniently dusted it off again last week.

From what I can tell this isn't trickling over from overt propaganda like RT, seems to be more a symptom of conspiracy theory galaxy brain (Soros is also involved in this narrative, of course). Best performing content over the past few months comes from US outlets/commentators

This section should be particularly instructive for the US at the moment...

Interference in the 2017 French Elections

27. From on or about April 3, 2017 through on or about May 3, 2017, during the days leading up to the May 7, 2017 presidential election in France, the Conspirators conducted seven spearphishing campaigns targeting more than 100 individuals who were members of now-President Macron's "La République En Marche!" ("En Marche!") political party, other French politicians and high-profile individuals, and several email addresses associated with local French governments. The topics of these campaigns included public security announcements regarding terrorist attacks, email account lockouts, software updates for voting machines, journalist scoops on political scandals, En Marche! press relationships, and En Marche! internal cybersecurity recommendations.

Lest we forget the potential grave human effect of cyber attacks: extensive damage done at a hospital in PA

40. For the next several hours, Heritage Valley's computer hard drives were encrypted; workstations were locked; patient lists, patient medical history information, physical examination files, and prior laboratory records were inaccessible (so pre-operative laboratory work needed to be redone); and Heritage Valley's servers were inaccessible. The attack also caused Heritage Valley to lose access to its mission-critical computer systems (such as those relating to cardiology, nuclear medicine, radiology, and surgery) for approximately one week and other administrative computer systems for almost one month. In addition to disrupting Heritage Valley's provision of critical healthcare to residents of the Western District of Pennsylvania, Heritage Valley spent more than $2 million responding to, and recovering from, the attack.

In South Korea, attempts to use mobile apps for malicious purposes, all quickly thwarted

Malicious Mobile Application Development Targeting the 2018 Winter Olympics

53. On or about December 1, 2017, the Conspirators created a malicious "Seoul Bus Tracker" mobile application and registered the application with a mobile application store approximately one hour later. The application became available to the public on or about December 18, 2017, but the application store promptly identified and suspended the application before any downloads occurred.

54. On or about December 25, 2017, the Conspirators created a mobile application called "HanMail" that mimicked the name of a legitimate Korean email service. The application became available to the public the next day, but the application store promptly identified and suspended the application before any downloads occurred.

55. On or about December 28, 2017, the Conspirators created a mobile application called "Hmail App Naver Mail Hanmail Daum" that again mimicked the name of the legitimate Korean email service. The application became available to the public on or about January 6, 2018. 47 accounts installed this application before the mobile application store suspended the application.

The Trump camp, with Tucker Carlson in the lead, are starting to accuse Democrats of fomenting "color revolution." Of all the Kremlin talking points these guys have recycled, I didn't think I'd ever see this one picked up. I was wrong

From what I can tell this isn't trickling over from overt propaganda like RT, seems to be more a symptom of conspiracy theory galaxy brain (Soros is also involved in this narrative, of course). Best performing content over the past few months comes from US outlets/commentators

This is silly. At one point last week, the Hunter Biden story accounted for nearly 40% of Fox's coverage. You don't get to do wall-to-wall coverage on this and then leak that you passed on the story so you look above the fray. C'mon.

Saw "color revolution" used in a few memes while doing my normal monitoring on Facebook yesterday. Also shocked to see it used in a US context, referring to America... and how many Americans even know what it means? Whatever meaning it did have has been obliterated by this stunt.

Just wondering: has the Kremlin disinformation machine injected the color-revolution against Trump theme into the US right wing media ecosystem?

From what I can tell this isn't trickling over from overt propaganda like RT, seems to be more a symptom of conspiracy theory galaxy brain (Soros is also involved in this narrative, of course). Best performing content over the past few months comes from US outlets/commentators

This is exactly the point. "If you can't take the heat, get out of the kitchen" is something I've gotten a lot recently. Unless we're here to be looked at and appraised, there are a lot of men who would be happy for us to completely disappear from public spaces altogether.

So at the risk of being "one of those men" is this not an example of the huge difference in risk mitigation men and women take? Anyone who's not operating in bad faith understands exactly what you said, and it shouldn't need any clarification for fear of "WE Remember, friends, that despite their rhetoric, people who pull stunts like this aren't doing it because they want our country to become a better, more understanding, freer place. They're doing it for personal gain and personal gain alone.

@BrandyZadrozny has done incredibly important reporting all around, but this is a story that will always stick with me. Folks that are harassing her: do you approve of this medicinal disinfo, claiming innocent lives?

Just to point out to people harassing @BrandyZadrozny: the "doxing" she allegedly participated in is totally standard and how information is found uncovered almost every piece of worthwhile reporting. But you know that, you just want to harass someone.

Here's the @Reuters story on today's hastily convened press conference blaming Iran for the 'Proud Boys' email threats.
reuters.com/article/us-usa …

I note these paragraphs in particular:

The emails are under investigation, and one intelligence source said it was still unclear who was behind them.

Another government source said that U.S. officials are investigating whether people in Iran had hacked into a Proud Boys network or website to distribute threatening materials. This source said U.S. officials suspect the Iranian government was involved but that the evidence remains inconclusive.

Not sure what "leaning in" has to do with this, John, except maybe evidence of your misogyny, but any journalist committed to fair reporting is using these very same tools. Darren might have done his own research and avoided this embarrassment. No one is "doxxing" anyone.

All of this amounts to an environment of distrust, unfortunately. When the American people are being briefed about ongoing threats to this election, I would prefer to not have to read between the lines of official announcements like a Soviet Kremlinologist.

The American people should trust that they're getting the full picture on foreign interference, not one viewed through a political lens meant to meet political ends. Sadly, that isn't our reality right now.

On the one hand, the FBI director and Rubio/Warner statement say that we should be wary of those who are trying to spreading "unverified, sensational claims related to votes and voting"
On the other hand, Ratcliffe, doing exactly that

Ratcliffe has zero credibility, imo.

horrible thing, Russia has some files."

Meanwhile, we know Russia has been interfering in political processes around the world for over a decade. Its US operations never stopped after 2016.

The intel community's public assessments of foreign interference this election cycle have all given short shrift to Russia; we saw this with an initial notification about interference activities in July which placed China above Russia

And DNI Ratcliffe made the bizarre decision to declassify unverified intel about the 2016 election in what seemed to be a political move

Buried in this article about a Dutch hacker gaining access to the President's Twitter account for a second time because he "used an exceptionally weak password,"(!!!!!) is another tidbit casting doubt on the provenance of the NY Post's laptop saga:

volkskrant.nl/nieuws-achterg ...

Victor Gevers was also one of the three hackers who logged into Trump's account in 2016. 'That we would succeed in doing it again so soon, was not planned', he says about the buildup to the action. The reason for making another attempt to hack Trump's account was the reporting in the US about Hunter Biden. A hard disk owned by presidential candidate Joe Biden's son was supposedly stolen or hacked - also because Hunter Biden used an easy to guess password (Hunter02). Gevers is familiar with leaked databases of old passwords and searched these for Hunter Biden's data. After analysing these old databases, he felt that the information was incorrect. Hunter Biden used other passwords. Gevers: 'I could tell that it wasn't his password.'

We need to turn the lights out in Moscow for a few days. What Russia is doing is an act of war. We need to teach them not to mess with us about something as important as our election.

Buried in this article about a Dutch hacker gaining access to the President's Twitter account for a second time because he "used an exceptionally weak password," (?!!!!) is another tidbit casting doubt on the provenance of the NY Post's laptop saga.

volkskrant.nl/nieuws-achterg…

Victor Gevers was also one of the three hackers who logged into Trump's account in 2016. 'That we would succeed in doing it again so soon, was not planned', he says about the buildup to the action. The reason for making another attempt to hack Trump's account was the reporting in the US about Hunter Biden. A hard disk owned by presidential candidate Joe Biden's son was supposedly stolen or hacked - also because Hunter Biden used an easy to guess password (Hunter02). Gevers is familiar with leaked databases of old passwords and searched these for Hunter Biden's data. After analysing these old databases, he felt that the information was incorrect. Hunter Biden used other passwords.

Funny how people who are super shady online, using anonymity to abuse, harass, and doxx, get mad when journalists and researchers use said shady peoples' sloppy mistakes to ensure that they can't abuse, harass, and doxx anymore.

People may not understand how editorial judgment works.

NPR did not simply amplify NYP Biden story because its claims weren't authenticated & it didn't really advance knowledge about Hunter's actions. Doesn't mean reporters weren't deployed. Or lack of interest in covering Biden

NBC News Statement

Over the past several years, journalists from news organizations around the world have put themselves at risk in order to shine a light in the dark corners of society and the Internet – specifically in the realm of conspiracy theories and online extremism.

Last night on FOX News Channel, Tucker Carlson dangerously and dishonestly targeted one of those journalists – Brandy Zadrozny. Brandy represents the best of investigative journalism and of NBC News. She is relentlessly well-researched and sophisticated in her understanding of disinformation and conspiracy theories on the Internet and within some social media communities. She's written definitive stories on extremism, QAnon, the profiteers behind rising anti-vaccination and COVID denial movements – among many other topics. Her

As the daughter of a veteran who got a few extra years of life thanks to the VA, this is my response any time I hear criticisms of government-run healthcare.

We provide healthcare to our veterans. It can be improved, of course, but we do it. And we can provide it for everyone.

> Dan Baer @danbbaer
> If public option is bad because it is public then Donald Trump must want to take the VA away from all our veterans. Guess he thinks they are suckers.

I was thinking of pitching a quick piece about the election security section of the debate, but I realized it can be summed up in a tweet:

One candidate cogently discussed actual policies for keeping our democracy safe.

The other spouted convaluted conspiracies.

American Federation of Government Employees National President Everett Kelley said in a statement on Thursday that the executive order is "the most profound undermining of the civil service system in our lifetimes."

Greenw*ld and Fang et al keep asking why reporters won't "do their jobs" on the Hunter Biden story, but what they are actually angry about is that reporters do do their jobs, and because of what they find don't print stories on bullshit.

One of the perception of credibility problems of reporters is that reporters don't get to "show their work" on stories they reject. The public doesn't get that, and it's a attack surface for conspiracists. But you would expect reporters to know better informational chaos without the deployment of cut and dry "fakes." In fact, fake news encompasses just a sliver of Russian influence operations. The most convincing Russian narratives, and indeed, the most successful, in both Central and Eastern Europe and the United States, are narratives grounded in truth that exploit the divisions in societies. These truths can be undisputed facts or the perceived realities of life for marginalized populations that Russian operations target. As such, total fabrications gain notoriety much less often than those that contain a kernel of truth.

Loved talking to @MeghnaWBUR for @OnPointRadio this morning about how Russia and other foreign adversaries exploit the internal weaknesses in our societies to sow discord. Special appearances by @DmytroKuleba, Ukraine's Foreign Minister! Listen here:

Trump claimed over the weekend that he could solve a 30-year conflict between Armenia and Azerbaijan that exploded anew a month ago, calling it “an easy one.” Here’s the Armenian prime minister saying the US-brokered ceasefire failed before it really began.

Nikol Pashinyan @NikolPashinyan
I would like to state that the efforts of the international community, this time brokered by the #UnitedStates to establish a ceasefire, have failed. As a result of continuous shelling by Azerbaijan, civilians were killed and wounded in #Artsakh today. @realDonaldTrump

PS The most successful disinformation often includes a kernel of truth. From HOW TO LOSE THE INFORMATION WAR:

(US and Int'l purchase links: wiczipedia.com)

In many cases, including in Estonia, where the Russian government instigated protests over the removal of a Soviet statue, or in Poland, where Russia withheld the wreckage of the plane crash that killed the Polish president to fuel conspiracy theories, Russian policies create informational chaos without the deployment of cut and dry "fakes." In fact, fake news encompasses just a sliver of Russian influence operations. The most convincing Russian narratives, and indeed, the most successful, in both Central and Eastern Europe and the United States, are narratives grounded in truth that exploit the divisions in societies. These truths can be undisputed facts or the perceived realities of life for marginalized populations that Russian operations target. As such, total fabrications gain notoriety much less often than those that contain a kernel of truth.

In HOW TO LOSE THE INFORMATION WAR I predicted that a second Trump admin might seek to eliminate outlets like RFERL. That they're rushing to do this before the end of Trump's term shows they are not invested in USAGM's mission or the values the US has, until now, represented.

Trump won reelection and the deterioration of the American information ecosystem continued apace. The Republican Party—newly returned to a Congressional majority and eager to please the Trump voters that had put them in office—offered little resistance as the Trump administration's diatribes about the "fake news media" became government policy. They slashed funding for the Public Broadcasting Station and National Public Radio and set US foreign broadcasters such as Radio Free Europe, one of the only stable vectors America had in place to counter Russian influence abroad, on a path to extinction. For-profit journalism did not fare much

In HOW TO LOSE THE INFORMATION WAR I predicted that a second Trump admin might seek to eliminate outlets like RFERL. That they're rushing to do this before the end of Trump's term shows they are not invested in USAGM's mission or the values the US has, until now, represented.

Trump won reelection and the deterioration of the American information ecosystem continued apace. The Republican Party—newly returned to a Congressional majority and eager to please the Trump voters that had put them in office—offered little resistance as the Trump administration's diatribes about the "fake news media" became government policy. They slashed funding for the Public Broadcasting Station and National Public Radio and set US foreign broadcasters such as Radio Free Europe, one of the only stable vectors America had in place to counter Russian influence abroad, on a path to extinction. For-profit journalism did not fare much

Here are two of my favorite trolls, who went through the trouble of locating my Facebook profile and DMing me there ON THANKSGIVING to tell me what they thought of an interview I did that day.

you had a blessed and happy Thanksgiving. However, I just watched your report about Facebook on PBS Newshour and think I need to tell you I noticed something odd. While I was watching I noticed that the esophageal area of your throat seemed darkened. It may be the lighting, but I've seen many people in that situation who didn't have that appearance. It may be just your physique. Anyway, I don't mean to offend you in any way. yes, I'm aware of

I just watched your interview on PBS News Hour. I can't even recall what you were speaking of, because you said "UM" or "Uh" 16 times. Amazing anyone would interview you. I counted them.

It's 💯a defect of our current political discourse, which is itself the product of an imperfect society, that KH gets □□ □□□□□□□ hashtags while Pence gets tolerated

I call that (racist misogyny plus more) a bug.

TFW you're quoted in an article about gendered disinformation, you get combattive fan mail, send a perfectly polite email back, and are called "condescending" for saying "have a nice day." twitter.com/wiczipedia/sta ...

Your "Have a nice day" sounds awfully condescending, I must have touched a nerve.

I can't help wondering whether your response would have had a different tone if my wife (who shares my view) had sent the email rather than me.

In any event, thanks for your quick response.

The lesson here is probably "never respond," but I still have to take two minutes of my life reading and deleting this dreck when I have about ten thousand other things to do. (And no, I can't filter unknown senders in trash, or I will miss many of the press/speaking reqs I get)

On election night, there's going to be uncertainty & anxiety (about the results). We are really vulnerable during those times to misinformation and disinformation. Don't fall for narratives that seek to equate uncertainty w/ illegitimacy and undermine our trust in the results.

SOMETIMES, and not always, can the broadcast networks and the AP call presidential elections on Election Night. That's because they have ENOUGH of the vote to know which direction the state is going or, in the AP's case, if the other candidate doesn't have a path left to win.

Domenico Montanaro @DomenicoNPR · 18 Sek.

The AP didn't call the Trump-Clinton race until 2:29 a.m. Wednesday morning in 2016. And at THAT POINT, Trump was still leading in the popular vote. I wrote a post at 3:06 a.m. ET that said Clinton was likely to win the popular vote. And I UNDERESTIMATED by how much by 1.2m votes.

Clinton Could Win The Popular Vote And Lose The Electoral College

My back-of-the-envelope math shows that it's possible that Clinton will win the popular vote even if she loses the Electoral College.

This is important. We're seeing early calls made by bad faith actors; combined with the narrative the President & his associates have pushed about "rigging" for months, this is meant to cast doubt on the legitimacy of the democratic process.

Remember: democracy takes time.

I like the confidence this statement is projecting but asserting we will prevent any interference or influence operation is a bit of a stretch. We've rendered them less effective, certainly, but objectively we are not yet at "fool proof"

In places where I've worked, like Ukraine, where there is a history of actual voter fraud, distrust in the system persists long after election administration improves. No matter what happens this year, we're going to need to do serious work to restore confidence.

In the light of day, and in the context of the countries in which I've lived and worked, Trump's assault on democracy in his speech last night looks even more dire.

We count all the votes in America, whether cast in person, early, or by mail. That's what makes America great.

> Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia
> In places where I've worked, like Ukraine, where there is a history of "actual" voter fraud, distrust in the system persists long after election administration improves. No matter what happens this year, we're going to need to do serious work to restore confidence.

Perspective on why Trump's claims of victory - which amount to disinformation, in my view - are antithetical to democracy:

Popular vote so far:
68,818,209 votes Biden
66,187,571 votes Trump

We know more than 100 million Americans cast early votes.

Every vote counts.

I really cannot stress this enough. There isn't a single state, run by either Rs or Ds, where counting isn't ongoing today. Just because you're not watching those states doesn't mean it's not happening. Same thing happening in AL and MD as is happening in PA and GA.

> David Becker @beckerdavid
> Workers have been counting 140+M ballots for only 36 hours. They are still counting in EVERY state. Some states have margins so wide these remaining ballots can't make a difference, but what's happening in those states is much the same as what's happening in swing states.

Good morning. Here is a new thread on misinformation and other garbage we're seeing across the internet, 2 days after Election Day. If yesterday's volume was misinformation around election results, today I am most worried about real-life action stemming from private online spaces voters to mark ballots with varying types of writing instruments, based on state law and other considerations such as tabulation system requirements. Poll workers are required to provide approved writing devices to voters.

In case you missed @BrandyZadrozny + @oneunderscore 's reporting last night, a Facebook anti-lockdown group with 79,000+ members mobilized to drive people to a vote-counting location in Detroit. Facebook later shut down the group.

Although felt-tip pens, like Sharpies, may bleed through ballots, some election officials have stated that ballot tabulation equipment in their jurisdictions can still read these ballots. Many jurisdictions even design their ballots with offset columns to prevent any potential bleed through from impacting the ability to easily scan both sides of ballots.

If a ballot has issues that impact its ability to be scanned, it can be hand counted or duplicated, or adjudicated by election officials, who use

Another idea, documents show, was to tweak recommendation algorithms to suggest a wider range of Facebook groups than people would ordinarily encounter.

Building these features and combating polarization might come at a cost of lower engagement, the Common Ground team warned in a mid-2018 document, describing some of its own proposals as "antigrowth" and requiring Facebook to "take a moral stance."

This great @WIRED piece from @wiczipedia and @CindyOtis_ details problems with Groups in spreading both health and political disinformation. Their conclusion: Facebook Groups are Destroying America. wired.com/story/facebook …

Groups continue to be used for political disinformation. The "Obamagate" conspiracy theory has yet to be defined in clear terms, even by its own adherents, and yet our analysis of Facebook groups shows that the false narrative that the Obama administration illegally spied against people associated with the Trump campaign is being fueled and nurtured there. Related memes and links to fringe right-wing websites have been shared millions of times on Facebook in the past few months. Users coordinating their activities across networks of groups and pages managed by a small handful of people boost these narratives. At least nine coordinated pages and two groups

There was a lot of breathless reporting in 2020 advancing the "Russians are coming to destroy our election" narrative. By all indications — so far — that didn't happen. Social media still has huge work to do to fix enormous disinfo problems, but news orgs must be self-critical, too.

We may learn more in the weeks and months ahead, as we did after 2016, and the election isn't over yet. But the NSA chief is on the record saying foreign interference had been smaller so far than it was even in 2018. Fed agencies and state/local officials deserve a lot of credit.

And in most states you need special accreditation and training. You can't just show up.

Bakhti Nishanov @bnishanov
I know this is not rational at this point but as someone who's done this repeatedly, polling stations are always staffed with both D and R poll workers. You have to explicitly state your party affiliation, and election administrators go out of their way to ensure a balance of D/R

In general: we don't know what works & the brave new world outside the take down/leave up false binary of content moderation will need far more research & its gonna be messy but limiting amplification/sharing -- not size, color or wording -- is easily the biggest diff b/t the labels

If she let the dog roam for a moment & pooch came back w/a MAGA hat on, would @BrandyZadrozny send the poor beast to re-education camp? A gulag? Or straight to euthanization? Such are the quandaries that defy rational thought circulating in this petty tyrant's irrational mind.

Facebook Groups have historically been a breeding ground for hate and violent rhetoric. Over the last 24 hours we found disturbing messages in the group that organized to harass the Biden-Harris bus, as well as in short-lived 'Stop The Steal.'

SAN FRANCISCO — Facebook is planning to enact new measures to make it more difficult for election misinformation to spread virally across its platform, two people with knowledge of the matter said Thursday, as the outcome of presidential race remains uncertain.

Facebook plans to add more "friction" — such as an additional click or two — before people can share posts and other content, said the people, who requested anonymity because they were not authorized to speak publicly. The company will also demote content on the News Feed if it contains election-related misinformation, making it less visible, the Watching this counting mess, god bless Ukrainian teachers who are often in charge of the ballot count and, even during turnouts over 60%, just power through the election night and always deliver the final tally by sunset. Real heroes of democracy.

Ukrainian teachers are amazing in their efficiency, but what the US is dealing with is an unprecedented situation with far more mail-in ballots than ever in history, fewer poll workers, plus resource and political obstacles. They're not really comparable.

The process of organizing a ballot count is quite similar across all democracies. And the US is not the only democracy that had an election this year (incl Ukraine.) Isn't it concerning that a 65% turnout is already problematic for the wealthiest democracy to process?

In the US it's actually quite different given that the count is run by states, not the federal govt. We are dealing with a far worse pandemic, far more votes (incl mail in ballots which require pre canvassing), and an unprecedented political situation w effects on election admin.

I take comfort in the fact that the election officials are taking their time, being careful, and doing their best with the system we have at the moment. Does it have problems? Yes. But snarky impatience isn't going to fix them.

This is becoming a common 'logical' refrain in some sections of the Right, despite the fact that Russian election interference was A) conducted over the internet not mail in ballot and B) widely confirmed by US intelligence agencies

Charlie Kirk
@charliekirk11

The same people who spent the last 4 years falsely saying Russians rigged our elections are now saying there's no way an election could be rigged by illegal ballots and voter fraud. How does that work?

Not my job to fix or address those self-evident inefficiencies, but since Americans always offer their help and opinion in pointing out what's wrong with our foreign elections, I feel like it's fair for us to return the favor :)

Again, I don't take issue with criticism of the process. I take issue with the comparison and the baseless snark. It doesn't accomplish anything.

US intelligence agencies are widely discredited as a source of information

I agree that we should not take them as gospel but the extent of their research and the Mueller report [illegible] puts this one beyond doubt

Not to mention open source research that lays it bare, and a bipartisan senate report of multiple volumes!

HARRIS

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

November 7, 2020

Statement by President-elect Joe Biden

I am honored and humbled by the trust the American people have placed in me and in Vice President-elect Harris.

In the face of unprecedented obstacles, a record number of Americans voted. Proving once again, that democracy beats deep in the heart of America.

With the campaign over, it's time to put the anger and the harsh rhetoric behind us and come together as a nation.

Good job @instagram @instagramComms

Glad "degenerates like you will be dealt with in the streets" doesn't go against your community standards. Makes total sense. This person definitely is not insinuating they'd like a mob to kill me. Cool.

We didn't remove dabcat710's comment

When we say "the media" called the election, this means certain news organizations sent people to find out how people voted, which is public information gathered by 50 states and 3,100 counties. They put the available numbers in context. Then they reported what the facts were.

There are other ways to read this besides Putin disliking Biden. First to drive home Russia's criticism of US elections for its own domestic messaging. And second because Donald Trump is still President for two more months and maybe Russia sees a chance to strike a last deal.

Journalists, if you're going to write about this, please understand the difference between a recount and an audit. A risk-limiting audit does not recount all the ballots. Officials manually examine only a PERCENTAGE of randomly chosen paper ballots in such an audit.

In this particular case GA will manually audit ALL of the ballots in the presidential race because of the type of risk-limiting audit they've chosen to do and because they chose the presidential race to audit. In risk-limiting audits, the percentage of ballots examined

FB extends political ads ban for another month. This is going to complicate the Georgia Senate races.

POLITICO @politico
Facebook alerted political strategists today that the company plans to extend its ban on political ads for another month, upending digital ad preparations for two Georgia Senate runoffs that will decide control of Congress politico.com/news/2020/11/1...

Unclear why they can't unpause them for those candidates affected and not allow the ads up unless they've been moderated by a human 🤦‍♀️ Probably hard to define / draw boundaries - eg. where it's paid from, who it's paid for. Think RNC.

Krebs knows that disinformation knows no political party -- something many in Washington need to be reminded of White House officials have asked for content to be edited or removed from the website which has pushed back against numerous false claims about the election, including that Democrats are behind a mass election fraud scheme. In response, CISA officials have refused to delete accurate information.

In particular, one person said the White House was angry about a CISA post rejecting a conspiracy theory that falsely claims an intelligence agency supercomputer and program, purportedly named Hammer and Scorecard, could have flipped votes nationally. No such system exists, according to Krebs, election security experts and former U.S. officials.

NEW: Joint statement from @CISAgov @EACgov @NASSorg @NASEDorg + private sector partners are in agreement - this election was "the most secure in American history."

"There is no evidence that any voting system deleted or lost votes, changed votes, or was in any way compromised."

"The November 3rd election was the most secure in American history. Right now, across the country, election officials are reviewing and double checking the entire election process prior to finalizing the result.

When states have close elections, many will recount ballots. All of the states with close results in the 2020 presidential race have paper records of each vote, allowing the ability to go back and count each ballot if necessary. This is an added benefit for security and resilience. This process allows for the identification and correction of any mistakes or errors. There is no evidence that any voting system deleted or lost votes, changed votes, or was in any way compromised.

Other security measures like pre-election testing, state certification of voting equipment, and the U.S. Election Assistance Commission's (EAC) certification of voting equipment help to build additional confidence in the voting systems used in 2020.

While we know there are many unfounded claims and opportunities for misinformation about the process of our elections, we can assure you we have the utmost confidence in the security and integrity of our elections, and you should too. When you have questions, turn to elections officials as trusted voices as they administer elections."

The guy who wrote this puff piece thinks Crimea is a “picturesque, hospitable country.”

What it really is: a territory and people held hostage. Russia regularly disappears and imprisons journalists and activists there for their work.

Is the in the habit of encouraging travelers to break the law? Because this piece leaves out that by entering Crimea from Russia (which illegally annexed the territory from Ukraine in 2014), travelers would be breaking Ukrainian law and banned from entering Ukraine

5 12 70

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia · 28 cze 2019

Not to mention, of course, that Russia broke international law by annexing Crimea and regularly violates the human rights of its citizens

In an age of state-sponsored disinformation and propaganda, should not be legitimizing these actions

How to Lose the Information War
By Nina Jankowicz
IB Tauris, £20
Nina Jankowicz has made a special study of what makes societies vulnerable to the spread of Russian interference. Her expertise is based on her having advised five central and eastern European governments on the front lines of the information war and she uses these as case studies to show how and where Russia interfered and how these countries fought back. Her warning is stark: Russia's greatest successes haven't been in misinformation/disinformation but in "narratives grounded in truth that exploit pre-existing divisions in societies", divisions such as US race relations, UK economic disparity and the immigration

Able to admire without envy

Getting nothing out of life except things

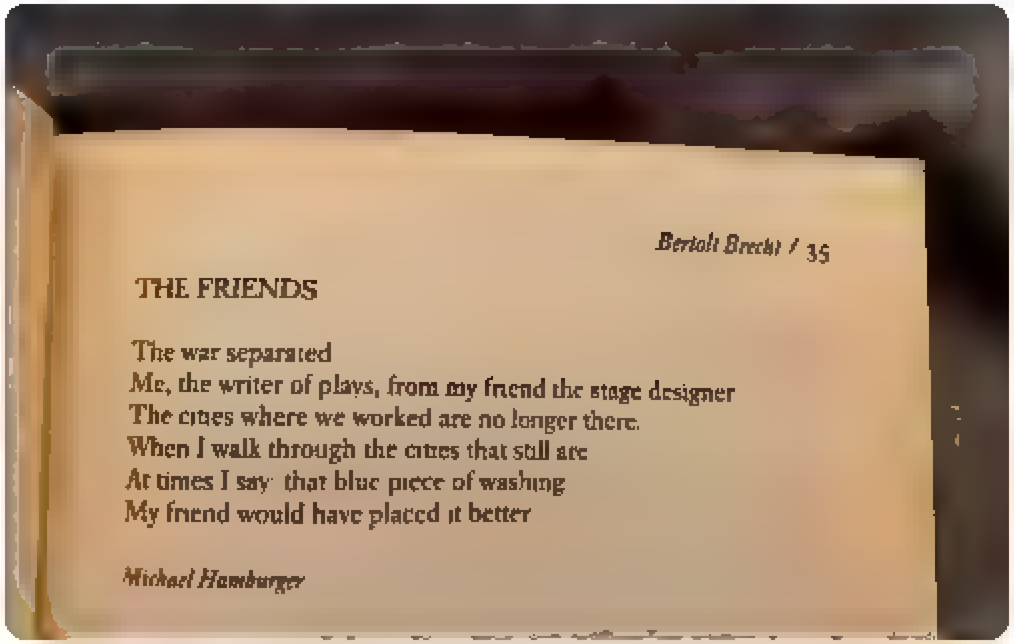
Poem of the day:

"The Friends" by Bertolt Brecht, translated from the German by Michael Hamburger



Bertolt Brecht / 35

THE FRIENDS

The war separated
Me, the writer of plays, from my friend the stage designer
The cities where we worked are no longer there.
When I walk through the cities that still are
At times I say: that blue piece of washing
My friend would have placed it better

Something I've discussed with but I wonder if this particular op was just distribution of discourse, where they'd normally target one country, specifically, the operation was large enough to accommodate several, with coordinated political attacks

Jennifer M Jones @jennifermjones · 12 Min

Yeah, like identify cracks and widen them, then let real people run with it. There was a schism in Scotland/UK on the discourse from 2012 (so early), Arab Spring (2010), Brexit, the states.

There was a genuine buzz about feeling like social media (the people) somehow had an impact but perhaps it is rolling back and seeing how much we've all been played

Snags @Snagsy1980 · 7 Min

This! It's summed up beautifully in …'s "how to lose the information war", starts with Estonia in 2007 and shows the development of it and countries' good and bad responses to it. Real people have been weaponised for political gains, using social media for a long time.

Krebs occupied a unique space in the Trump admin, earning bipartisan support for the work he was doing to protect the 2018/2020 elections while avoiding the ire of the president—until recently. Some Dems hoped he might stay on in the Biden administration.

Hi. Multiple-time election observer here. You don't just send your supporters into polling places to "go and watch." If a leader of a foreign country did that, international organizations would be extraordinarily concerned.

Election observation is not something anyone can simply "go and do." It requires training. It requires restraint. The fact that the President is encouraging his supporters to "go and watch" is inviting voter intimidation and potentially violence.

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia · 30.09

One of the things we look for when we are visiting polling stations in foreign countries is large crowds that are clearly there to agitate for one party or another. This is an indication that something is very wrong, that one group is trying to keep another away from the polls.

Good advice from @wiczipedia on how to counter the deluge of disinformation. This bit in particular spoke to me knowing the budgets I work with when on foreign assignments and the horror I experience when watching cable "news" talk shows foreignaffairs.com/articles/unite …

U.S. news networks and radio stations have helped drive polarization and distrust of the media in the United States. Countries that demonstrate greater resilience to disinformation, such as Germany and the United Kingdom, tend to invest in a robust public media ecosystem. The United States spends a paltry $1.35 per person per year on the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, despite polling that indicates that Public Broadcasting Service television programming is more trusted than that of its for-profit, private competitors. Local PBS and National Public Radio affiliates are sometimes the only outlets in areas that would

It's mid November, which means there are only 6 weeks till the end of the year, which means that I'm spending a lot of time researching planners. I love paper stationery and planners give me joy.

Other Twitter planner nerds: what are your favorites?

Yes, I use these for my morning pages, and actually this year used it for my planner as well. I just sometimes find that when I'm super busy my weekly setup falls by the wayside so I'd like to go back to something slightly more structured for planner purposes!

This Court has been unable to find any case in which a plaintiff has sought such a drastic remedy in the contest of an election, in terms of the sheer volume of votes asked to be invalidated. One might expect that when seeking such a startling outcome, a plaintiff would come formidably armed with compelling legal arguments and factual proof of rampant corruption, such that this Court would have no option but to regrettably grant the proposed injunctive relief despite the impact it would have on such a large group of citizens.

That has not happened. Instead, this Court has been presented with strained legal arguments without merit and speculative accusations, unpled in the operative complaint and unsupported by evidence. In the United States of America, this

To the people complaining on Twitter about being banned on Parler. Please pay heed:

Here are the very few basic rules we need you to follow on Parler. If these are not to your liking, we apologize, but we will enforce:

When you disagree with someone, posting pictures of your fecal matter in the comment section WILL NOT BE TOLERATED

Your username cannot be obscene like "CumDumpster"

No pornography. Doesn't matter who, what, where, when or in what realm.

We will not allow you to spam other people trying to speak, with unrelated comments like "Fuck you" in every comment. It's stupid. It's pointless. Grow up.

You cannot threaten to kill anyone in the comment section. Sorry, never ever going to be okay.

If ever in doubt, ask yourself if you would say it on the streets of New York or national television.

Faulting The Queen's Gambit for a too positive image of the Soviet Union, like it's a documentary? We're back in a Cold War?

Russia is not villainous in The Queen's Gambit, and that seems precisely the point. While the country is structurally set up to be Beth's (and by extension, America's) opposition, the Soviets end up representing something closer to virtuous gamesmanship. The final episode, in which Beth travels to Russia to compete against grand master Vasily Borgov, is a remarkably optimistic one. With the collective help of chess-playing men from her past, Beth takes home the title, winning through a collaborative effort that feels remarkably Soviet. There is Yeah I also don't agree with that point, I thought they actually handled the "Russians are atheists and atheists are bad" point fairly capably. I really liked it overall (but I'm not super critical about the TV I'm consuming these days)!

“You choose from two WHITE old men and lie to the world about the needs of people! Recognize Crimea as Russian!”

Just one of the 7500 Instagram comments I tracked back to a bumbling cash-for-engagement scheme just before the Presidential Election:

This is a big get from @alexeheath. More than 110,000 government government officials and candidates were on a Facebook whitelist that prevented them from being factchecked — and subsequently have their reach reduced — for spreading misinformation. theinformation.com/articles/faceb …

Since 2018, Facebook had maintained a "political whitelist" of about 112,000 accounts belonging to government officials and candidates whose posts couldn't be fact checked, a process that can trigger penalties for posts found to contain misinformation, such as reduced reach, according to the presentation. The employees, led by a trio of researchers on Facebook's team charged with overseeing its role in civic discourse, wanted the list dissolved. Existence of this list and the research about its impact haven't previously been reported.

This begs further questions: What happens when one of those political or candidate accounts violates another FB rule, like those regarding QAnon or covid misinformation? There's now a Q supporting politician in the House. Is she on the list?

There was a period of high school when I had a soda and two bags of chips - one salt and vinegar, one sour cream and onion - for lunch most days. Sometimes I followed this up with more chips and more soda at rehearsal or debate club after school. How did I function?!

> America is musty @Dragonflyjonez
> High school is really a bizarre experience in retrospect. Would start your morning at 8am with a honey bun and an orange soda and then would learn about the Pythagorean theorem, read Robert Frost and then go run a mile all in a span of 3 hours.

There was a period of high school when I had a soda and two bags of chips (one salt and vinegar, one sour cream and onion) for lunch most days. Sometimes I followed this up with more chips and more soda at rehearsal or debate club after school. How did I function?!

> America is musty @Dragonflyjonez
> High school is really a bizarre experience in retrospect. Would start your morning at 8am with a honey bun and an orange soda and then would learn about the Pythagorean theorem, read Robert Frost and then go run a mile all in a span of 3 hours.

Hi. Multiple-time election observer here. You don't just send your supporters into polling places to "go and watch." If a leader of a foreign country did that, international organizations would be extraordinarily concerned.

Election observation is not something anyone can simply "go and do." It requires training. It requires restraint. The fact that the President is encouraging his supporters to "go and watch" is inviting voter intimidation and potentially violence.

One of the things we look for when we are visiting polling stations in foreign countries is large crowds that are clearly there to agitate for one party or another. This is an indication that something is very wrong, that one group is trying to keep another away from the polls.

Not to mention that these women are, quite literally, the best in comms, gender aside.

We need to do our best as a country (I'm looking at you, platforms, politicians, humans) to stem the certain abuse that will be coming their way.

Exactly this — saying "nothing came of the attempts to undermine our democracy" ignores the dangerous normalization of these tactics that these campaigns aim to achieve

> Chris Hayes @chrislhayes

Hi. Multiple-time election observer here. You don't just send your supporters into polling places to "go and watch." If a leader of a foreign country did that, international organizations would be extraordinarily concerned.

Election observation is not something anyone can simply "go and do." It requires training. It requires restraint. The fact that the President is encouraging his supporters to "go and watch" is inviting voter intimidation and potentially violence.

One of the things we look for when we are visiting polling stations in foreign countries is large crowds that are clearly there to agitate for one party or another. This is an indication that something is very wrong, that one group is trying to keep another away from the polls.

It's insane for a lawyer of the President to casually mention that a former government official should be killed. And then doubly insane to see no broad condemnation from republican lawmakers.

At some point, you've also got to ask why current officials at partner agencies of CISA, FBI, NSA, DNI, etc., are not pushing back with some kind of broad public statement to counter these different conspiracies that are being readily accepted by a large number of Americans.

I am deeply concerned by the ongoing penetration of government and corporate computer networks by a sophisticated foreign attacker.

I have been monitoring this situation carefully since last week, and after receiving a classified briefing yesterday, 2 things stand out to me:

First: It's clear we have work ahead of us on cybersecurity. The NDAA is one of the most significant cybersecurity bills to hit the President's desk & strengthens our ability to hunt for these very same threats.

So, the President should end his veto threats and sign that bill.

3 5 33

Rep. Elissa Slotkin @RepSlotkin · 4 Min.

Second: We have to strengthen our defenses against cyber threats, while making it clear that attackers will be held accountable.

This is one of the most serious breaches we have seen in our country, but unless those who carried it out face consequences, it won't be the last.

Pakinam Amer will get vaccinated @pakinamamer · 4 Min.

I can't stress enough how stealthy and sly this second wave of COVID is. I've been doing everything right (and then some — I've literally been criticized as being "too careful" even obsessive) and I still got it.

That's a wake up call for people who are doing it halfway. Don't.

Pakinam Amer will get vaccinated @pakinamamer · 3 Min.

Even with all the precautions, you're not 100% protected and nothing is foolproof. So keep doing your absolute best and following every single one of the precautions to minimize your chances of catching SARS-CoV-2. The chances are never zero, but you still have to try.

Pakinam Amer will get vaccinated @pakinamamer · 2 Min.

Even with symptoms that are moderate compared to people on vents or in hospitals, it's still horrible.

On the second day of symptoms, I kid you not, I googled: "can your brain get so hot it melts?" Because this is exactly what it felt like in the moment.

Moving on: Cullum is firmly in the tradition of what I consider to be the greatest Christmas album of all time: ... R's "When my Heart Finds Christmas." Great originals, inventive orchestrations, and Harry is a dish 😍

That album came out when I was a kiddo, but my earliest Christmas memories are of listening to Mitch Miller and the Gang's Holiday Sing Along. Every time I listen to this album I find myself wondering who the choir kid with the very aggressive vibrato is.

Those are my all time faves but honorable mentions to:
-Leslie Odom Jr's 2017 album
-The Beach Boys Christmas album
-The Waitresses' "Christmas Wrapping," mostly because my husband hates it 😇

I KNEW I had a citation for this somewhere. This doc, page six:

'fake news' is woefully inadequate to describe the complex phenomena of mis- and dis-information. As Zuckerman states, "It's a vague and ambiguous term that spans everything from false balance (actual news that doesn't deserve our attention), propaganda (weaponized speech designed to support one party over another), and disinformatsya (information designed to sow doubt and increase mistrust in institutions)."

Propaganda is attributable because its goals- supporting one party, ideology, government over others- are clear! The comparison I make lately is the difference between Russian Covid disinfo and Chinese campaigns to paint the CCP in a positive light for their handling of pandemic

Please consider losing the Comic Sans and not being a jerk

PS I'm from New Jersey. I have been to California exactly twice, and I do not particularly like it (sorry). This is my voice. Please insert any number of choice Jersey insults here.

Hello Nina,

I was just listening to your analysis on CBS on cyber attack. I appreciate your insight and information. It was very helpful.

Please consider losing the phony "cali" accent and just pronounce your vowels normally. It really pulls the listener out of the discussion and is more difficult to "hear" you and take you seriously. I realize many use this accent nowadays thinking they sound more professional. It does not. It is just annoying. Really annoying.

What really grinds my gears is that my accent - whatever it is- is quite mild, and my diction and enunciation are excellent thanks to years on stage. And what is this note about my pronunciation of "energy?" I watched the clip back and I am not aware of any other pronunciation.

President-elect Biden, in most extensive remarks on the SolarWinds hack to date, says Trump admin needs to clearly and publicly call out who is responsible and that all indications are Russia is the culprit.

Yanukovych gave the order? Did I miss something? No. I did not. My advice to those who study disinformation. Review your own integrity and bias first, otherwise things might end up in a (dis-)informative mess.

Please consider losing the Comic Sans and not being a jerk

PS I'm from New Jersey. I have been to California exactly twice, and I do not particularly like it (sorry). This is my voice. Please insert any number of choice Jersey insults here.

Hello Nina,

I was just listening to your analysis on CBS on cyber attack. I appreciate your insight and information. It was very helpful.

Please consider losing the phony "cali" accent and just pronounce your vowels normally. It really pulls the listener out of the discussion and is more difficult to "hear" you and take you seriously. I realize many use this accent nowadays thinking they sound more professional. It does not. It is just annoying. Really annoying.

Thinking about this year. At the start of 2020, I was still on the disinfo beat, with a focus on health. In the first two months, I published stories about people who fell into internet rabbit holes, to tragic consequences. This one will stay with me.

Taylor is 100% correct.

The reason we have problems with harassment on social media is because the platforms were built with cisgender white men in mind.

My understanding of this topic and the changes we need to make are only enhanced by the abuse I've experienced.

> Taylor Lorenz @TaylorLorenz
> Saying people who have experienced harassment online are somehow "unqualified" or "biased" because of that is false, but more importantly only serves to silence female reporters, black reporters, LGBTQ reporters, and anyone from marginalized group seeking to cover the space.

This is a common misconception. I'm retweeting not to dunk, but so more people see my response- until you've experienced harassment at scale you probably won't understand what it's like & how blocking/muting is not enough to protect your psyche or your physical security.

When I got badly dogpiled this fall most of the men in my life responded with "just ignore it!!!"

It's hard to ignore hundreds of tweets per hour picking apart your physical appearance, accusing you of being a deep state secret trans person, or saying you should be brutalized

Currently the infrastructure of social media platforms allows us to hide some of the worst behavior- what if we worked at stopping it and disincentivizing it altogether?

Questions for Roomba owners
-Do they actually go from hardwood floors to carpet easily?
-How do they work around furniture / plants / etc?
-Do they fall down the stairs?
-I am constantly covered in cat hair and I absolutely hate to vacuum, should I get one or is it not worth it Ours gets stuck on our high pile rug all the time. we have to vacuum that by hand. They're fine with plants/furniture. It has definitely helped w/ pet hair, but I agree with others who say it's very loud. We currently are regularly using a combo of the roomba and dyson cordless.

I'm proud of a lot of things I accomplished in 2020 (published my book, wrote a bunch, did hours and hours of media and speaking) but the funniest part of the year might've been getting called an "agent of American propgaganda" by a RT/Sputnik journo on live TV

Today I was called an "Agent of American Propaganda" for reiterating an established pattern of 10+ years of Russian interference 🤦‍♀️

So we built an app for that called #CitizenBrowser. Our first finding: the sharp impact of Facebook's political ad ban reversal in the Georgia Senate elections.

What do the big password managers do nowadays that Google and Apple pw managers don't?

Patrick Howell O'Neill @HowellONeill · 4 Min.

Seems like some of the old advantages about generating strong passwords and notifying exposed passwords are falling away. One answer is that 3rd party allows you to more easily move across platforms/walled gardens, that's important. What else?

Patrick Howell O'Neill @HowellONeill · 4 Min.

When I read password manager guides online, it seems like they're often stuck in 2016 ("You—everyone—MUST use a 3p password manager or you're irresponsible!") and not thinking about how Google/Apple/etc work with passwords today, so I'm curious to be honest with you, when parents call and ask for security advice, I really don't want the answer to need to involve a step-by-step guide to lastpass

To me the big advantage is that if somehow, someone got into my gsuite/apple accounts (already catastrophic), they wouldn't automatically have access to everything else!

Yep, I only do it through my 3rd party service, which also has 2FA on top of it. Also as someone who uses an iPhone but works on gsuite, the interoperability point you made earlier is also key for me.

Another good example of why reverse image search is something everyone should know how to do.

We are starting to see policies against manipulated media, but what about misattribution? In a lot of cases, just as important.

It's true, we can compare US elections to those in new, fragile democracies.

But that's mostly because this President has undermined the process at every turn. I wrote this in October and things have only devolved since then: theatlantic.com/ideas/archive/ ...

Glenn Kessler @GlennKesslerWP

This is a U.S. president speaking: "Take Third World countries. Their elections are more honest than what we've been going through in this country. It's a disgrace. It's a disgrace."

These images of deranged, violent individuals storming one of the symbols of American power are going to follow the United States around in every diplomatic and military endeavor for years to come.

Whatever credibility we had is obliterated.

This is what Trumpism has wrought.

I have seen Capitol Police shut down pretty much everything within a few square blocks of the Capitol because a mentally ill woman drove her car into a barricade. Why are people just able to mill around on the Capitol grounds today?

Wow. Republican Sen. Richard Burr: "The President bears responsibility for today's events by promoting the unfounded conspiracy theories that have led to this point."

Senator Burr Statement on Congressional Vote to Certify the 2020 Presidential Election

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
Wednesday, January 6, 2021

CONTACT: Caitlin Carroll 202-228-1616

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Today, Senator Richard Burr (R-NC) released the following statement.

"For nearly 250 years, our nation's commitment to the peaceful transition of power has been the shining hallmark of our democracy. Today, America's core principles were threatened by those seeking to forcibly stop our electoral process and overturn the results of a presidential election with which they disagreed.

"Let me be clear: these actions are not a defense of this country, but an attack on it.

"I supported President Trump's legal right to contest the election results through the courts, but the courts have now unanimously and overwhelmingly rejected these suits. No evidence of voter fraud has emerged that would warrant overturning the 2020 election. The President bears responsibility for today's events by promoting the unfounded conspiracy theories that have led to this point. It's past time to accept the will of American voters and to allow our nation to move forward.

"Congress will uphold its constitutional duty and certify the results of the election."

His use of the Presidency to destroy trust in our election and to poison our respect for fellow citizens has been enabled by pseudo political leaders whose names will live in infamy as profiles in cowardice. I didn't have any other information in the moment, so my brain pulled what it knew. It knew the president's manipulation and contempt for the media was at an all-time high, and that he had made a number of statements demonizing reporters.

The trial has been delayed year after year, so we don't have the full story on why five newspaper workers were killed that day.

But it has always made me sick that instead of finding hope by thinking of the president at such a trying time, I felt that he was the one attacking.

I live just a few blocks from the Cap. People with weapons, nooses, and Nazi gear were in my neighborhood. In front of my home.

Facebook locks Trump's account for the remainder of his term.

Mark Zuckerberg
12m

The shocking events of the last 24 hours clearly demonstrate that President Donald Trump intends to use his remaining time in office to undermine the peaceful and lawful transition of power to his elected successor, Joe Biden.

His decision to use his platform to condone rather than condemn the actions of his supporters at the Capitol building has rightly disturbed people in the US and around the world. We removed these statements yesterday because we judged that their effect -- and likely their intent -- would be to provoke further violence.

Following the certification of the election results by Congress, the priority for the whole country must now be to ensure that the remaining 13 days and the days after inauguration pass peacefully and in accordance with established democratic norms.

Over the last several years, we have allowed President Trump to use our platform consistent with our own rules, at times removing content or labeling his posts when they violate our policies. We did this because we believe that the public has a right to the broadest possible access to political speech, even controversial speech. But the current context is now fundamentally different, involving use of our platform to incite violent insurrection against a democratically elected government.

We believe the risks of allowing the President to continue to use our

I told my Mom goodbye today. I said I had a good life and I have no kids, no husband. I told her I want it to be peaceful but if our "leaders" do the wrong thing and we have to storm the Capitol, I am going to do it. Something has turned over in me and we can't go back. We did the right thing for our country all our lives and they sold us out to China. We did the right thing when it was 15 days to stop the spread. We were forced to watch BLM and Antifa burn and loot for a drug addict while we did the right thing. We were forced to stay home, get censored, arrested at church and businesses close down while big tech and China got richer. We went to vote and they bullied us and stole the election in front of our faces. We will not have taxation without representation. China Joe had his posse bully us, threaten us and steal this election right in front of our face. Today he tweeted 'mask up!' Well Joe ... FUCK YOU!!! You are not my master and you will never be President. I want peace. But I have tattooed on my heart 'Give me Liberty or Give me Death!' and what we have now is not liberty. It's tyranny. And as long as I have a breath to breathe, I will not stand for tyranny. See you there pedes. It will the honor of my life to fight alongside you!

I think it's important to acknowledge the failings of media literacy- it has never been a panacea. But for all the shortcomings presented in the thread, there are also positive examples. And I of course 100% agree with Crystal that we need to address the underlying fissures

For anyone who may not have heard it in the back: speaking foreign languages – Russian or otherwise – is not evidence of nefarious association with a foreign power.

(This is not a criticism of Ema, who is just reporting facts, but of those making all kinds of assumptions about.

Forgot about this one too! Certainly takes on a new light after this week! And @instagram didn't take it down when I reported it; I had to delete and block, which is wholly insufficient & gives you an idea of why we're in the situation we are 🙃 [redacted] You support online censorship and degenerates like you will be dealt with in the streets, just wait. No place in America for any type of social media censorship.

Do you think his followers got up this morning and read months & years of his tweets?
Or that they found a conscience as they slept last night?
Unlikely.
Trump types are deleting their Twitter accts & going to Parler

I'm aware the first pic is from Dec 24. Neither here nor there. That sentiment is pro-genocide and worn by a member of the group the President told to "stand back and stand by"

As for your second assertion, you're incorrect:

There's a video circulating on Parler that uses bits of Trump's most bellicose speeches in an attempt to inspire violence on Inauguration Day.

A line from Trump's speech at Liberty U appears in it, chilling in today's context:

Facebook's enforcement of its own rules during the Ukrainian election was a Potemkin village of regulations riddled with cracks and loopholes that were easily exploited.

With elections in a week, Europe should be worried.

This page has been consistenty violating Facebook's ad political ad/disclaimer policy since it went into effect March 18, and yet it is still allowed to buy ads... 🤦‍♀️

As I've been saying for weeks, FB's enforcement of its own policies in UA is spotty at best.

I'm glad that this fairly common sense step is finally happening. I am slightly stupefied as to why it couldn't have happened at the start of the election campaign. Imagine if ad rules in the US had only come into effect two weeks before the midterms. (2/)

Moreover, and I know I'm beating a dead horse here, but apparently we still haven't learned this: ads are among the least pernicious ways of delivering disinformation. The inauthentic organic content is what's really bad. (3/)

Stupendously obvious, but the number one thing that would help "unity" would be for the President to give a speech in which he admits all the voter fraud/stolen election stuff was a complete lie and tells his followers that he lost to Joe Biden. Obviously this will never happen

Hi. Multiple-time election observer here. You don't just send your supporters into polling places to "go and watch." If a leader of a foreign country did that, international organizations would be extraordinarily concerned.

Election observation is not something anyone can simply "go and do." It requires training. It requires restraint. The fact that the President is encouraging his supporters to "go and watch" is inviting voter intimidation and potentially violence.

76 2,4 хил. 12 хил.

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia · 30.09

One of the things we look for when we are visiting polling stations in foreign countries is large crowds that are clearly there to agitate for one party or another. This is an indication that something is very wrong, that one group is trying to keep another away from the polls.

Raise your hand if you're in favor of a big ol' THIS IS ILLEGAL label on posts that encourage unaccredited "observers" to show up at polling stations ✋

Parler's plight immediately drew condemnation from those on the right, who compared the big tech companies to authoritarian overlords. Representative Devin Nunes, a California Republican, told Fox News on Sunday that "Republicans have no way to communicate" and asked his followers to text him to stay in touch. Lou Dobbs, the right-wing commentator, wrote on Parler that the app had a strong antitrust case against the tech companies amid such "perilous times."

That so many of the January 6 rioters subscribed to QAnon and election-rigging conspiracy theories points to how disinformation, indoctrination, and extremism flourish online. @wiczipedia discusses policymakers' failure to address the growing threat:

Excellently argued, with a nod to Burma and Ukraine already grappling with the dangers of online extremism. I'd add South Asia to that list. We clearly have a blindspot that needs to be addressed, globally.

One consequence of the forced and self-deplatforming we're seeing is a mass exodus to encrypted messengers like Telegram. So far the US has mostly managed to avoid the widespread challenges that countries like Brazil, India, and Ukraine have faced in this vein. No longer.

So spreaders of hate will always easily find platforms from which to reach wide audiences unless encrypted messengers are banned / regulated, which to a lot of people (e.g. the people of Belarus to name but the most obvious) would be unconscionable. tell me I'm wrong?

Telegram is NOT an "encrypted messenger". It supports end-to-end encryption ONLY if it is turned on (not by default) and ONLY for single-user chats, never for groups the way Signal, WhatsApp and iMessage do by default. I can't believe that this myth persists.

Telegram keeps being referred to as an "encrypted messenger" when it is anything but, so that's why I objected. I'm guessing you mean non-public? That's a totally different concept. That said, Facebook groups are already non-public. Shift away from Twitter is something else

I think raising the security concerns the app has is critical and understand why you made the distinction. I think the problems presented by non-public vs encrypted means of comms vary. Eg if they wanted to, platforms could keep a closer eye on groups, DMs, etc. (cont.)

What encryption value though? It has much, much less encryption value compared to WhatsApp, Signal, iMessage and a million other apps out there. I know it's widely believed to have some extra encryption value but it's just not the case.

I remember when I was a 17 year old intern for NPR, living on Capitol Hill. I would take a walk down the Mall and see the light on in the Capitol dome and occasionally walk right in to watch the proceedings from the gallery.

It is so sad to see the place locked down right now.

One of the saddest things about the assault on the Capitol - a shrine to America's openness, accessbility, and transparency - is that by selfishly demanding access to these hallowed halls, the insurrectionists took it away for the rest of us.

One consequence of the forced and self-deplatforming we're seeing is a mass exodus to encrypted messengers like Telegram. So far the US has mostly managed to avoid the widespread challenges that countries like Brazil, India, and Ukraine have faced in this vein. No longer.

14 · 16 · 91

Matthew Schaaf @schfm · 14 Min

Fortunately encrypted messengers are less "social" and "viral," which I would assume means that people are less likely to be fed content that confirms their beliefs by the algorithm or to share such content with large groups of people. Does that make sense?

These neo-Nazi + supremacist networks already have hundreds of backup channels already in place.

Our Terms of Service expressly forbid public calls to violence. We carefully examine all incoming reports, and are monitoring the current situation closely. In the past 24 hours we have blocked dozens of public channels that published calls to violence for thousands of subscribers.

Telegram uses a consistent approach to protests and political debate across the globe, from Iran and Belarus to Thailand and Hong Kong. We welcome peaceful discussion and peaceful protests, but routinely remove publicly available content that contains direct calls to violence.

There's a huge interwoven network of neo-Nazi public channels making violent threats on Telegram.

Finding these groups by searching obvious hate-oriented keywords is still trivially easy

Full statement from Telegram on new Nazi channel bans, which targeted "dozens" of groups over the past 24 hours.

These neo-Nazi + supremacist networks already have hundreds of backup channels already in place.

> Our Terms of Service expressly forbid public calls to violence. We carefully examine all incoming reports, and are monitoring the current situation closely. In the past 24 hours we have blocked dozens of public channels that published calls to violence for thousands of subscribers.
> Telegram uses a consistent approach to protests and political debate across the globe, from Iran and Belarus to Thailand and Hong Kong. We welcome peaceful discussion and peaceful protests, but routinely remove publicly available content that contains direct calls to violence.

In other words, pointing out that a channel with a vague death threat to Biden is not actually coming from Trump himself and doing it with 200k followers is probably a good thing. (I would disagree if there were like bomb making instructions, but that channel was pretty boring).

The reason I've continued engaging in this thread is that Clint didn't bother to make a point and instead treated the concern I have, shared by plenty of others in this space, as if it were childish or incorrect, rather than engaging with it substantively as you have.

I still disagree with the reasoning you've outlined above - while the channel may not have been an exigent threat the tweet does not model best practice at a time when a LOT of people new to this beat are suddenly sharing info about it. It matters.

Radicalization can affect anyone, especially those longing for identity or answers in a difficult time.

We are at one of the hardest parts of this journey as a country: the future will demand empathy for the mildly radicalized, some of whom may sound crazed or vicious.

But it's necessary. We're going to have to be kind, and strong, to bring our friends and family back to reality.

The hotel is "very familiar with the guests" and "can confirm that they are not affiliated with any fringe groups looking to cause issues for the inauguration," a spox said.

The one thing I will say about "infighting" in this moment...

Women who are forced into the position of confronting men in our field often do it out of a duty to the public.

It's not self-serving.

Our aim is true.

17:37 - 13. Jan. 2021

Joan Donovan, PhD @BostonJoan 16 Sek.

For example, there is one man in this disinformation field that has consistently kept me out of meetings and collaborations. He ran an entire whisper campaign saying I was "not technical" and "don't understand data."

Meanwhile, count the number of peer reviewed papers he has?

Joan Donovan, PhD @BostonJoan 15 Sek.

So many women that he tried that on told me. They were surprised to hear he has never spoken to me. Not a word.

Women talk to each other.

Meanwhile, these men tell funders and colleagues that we don't have the experience and we are the ones who are hard to collaborate with.

Those who control the money, control the research agenda, control the field, and ultimately control the outcomes.

Women have more to lose by saying "I disagree" than we have to gain, every time we hit the post button.

But again, our aim is true

It's a reporting and research best practice not to share channel names, links, etc to extremist or other dangerous content as it allows others to find it.

1 1 20

Claire T. @WantToTecher · 22 Std
well, thanks to that report the channel was gone by the time I even saw the tweet. I'd say Clint did a good thing here.

1 1 50

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia · 21 Std
Telegram could have found the channel without naming it publicly for 200k followers to see. I also doubt this was the only report they received about it. The risk outweighs the benefit.

Maybe! But could be Pompeo trying to establish a "tough on Russia" reputation? An attack on Giuliani for usurping foreign policy? Distancing from future legal liabilities? Addressing electoral interference outside of the courts? A lot to unpack here, IMO.

Given the circumstances here in DC at the moment I've reported it to the FBI. If I reported every threat I got it would be a lot, but with this one the specific threat of civil war was the tipping point 😕

I think that especially if there is any backend information sharing going on at platforms, flagging emails like this during this turbulent time might allow them to ID potentially violent networks. This man has a phone number and other PII attached to this burner account. Use it.

For some reason there seems to be a lot of this going around lately. Sometimes I (inadvisedly) engage, and inevitably the result is anonymous men on the internet attempting to tell me, an expert, about my area of expertise, or challenge my lived experiences.

As a multicultural American who studies disinformation- no, multiculturalism isn't a division that our "enemies stoke." They weaponize the fact that we don't live up to the promise of American multiculturalism, a promise that drove my refugee grandfather to the US after WWII.

> Secretary Pompeo @SecPompeo
> US government account

> Woke-ism, multiculturalism, all the -isms — they're not who America is. They distort our glorious founding and what this country is all about. Our enemies stoke these divisions because they know they make us weaker.

This tweet encapsulates everything wrong with US foreign policy under the Trump Administration:

-couches foreign policy in domestic political battles
-gravely misunderstands an exigent threat to our nation
-embarassingly represents our history and values

Good riddance.

It's remarkable, and so sad, that this is the first time we've had a moment like this over the past year. The closest was the high school graduation ceremony event, which obviously was very different.

Hard to imagine a timely tweet like this getting out just a week ago. Trump's State Department famously stifled communications from posts.

> We're watching reports of protests in 38 Russian cities, arrests of 350+ peaceful protesters and journalists. The U.S. supports the right of all people to peaceful protest, freedom of expression. Steps being taken by Russian authorities are suppressing those rights.

A word on this debate over whether conservative women are "hotter." The answer is definitely yes, but not for the reason you think. It's because conservative women VALUE our femininity and our immutable differences. We aren't TRYING to be men. God made us WOMEN. Go us and go men!

1. If you're a man telling a woman how to deal with online misogyny: nope. Just stop. You may as well be giving me tampon advice. Intellectually, you may think you understand what online (or real life) harassment is, but you can't understand the effect it has on the target.

04:16 - 24. Jan. 2021

This is the approach I have deemed most effective for me. Other women may react differently. But we know what we're doing.

(If you want more info we'll be touching on some of these themes in our report launch tomorrow ...)

Good morning! Lots of men among my followers were giving me suggestions about how to deal with online misogynists in responses to this thread yesterday.

Here are a few reasons why it's not particularly helpful or constructive.

1. If you're a man telling a woman how to deal with online misogyny: nope. Just stop. You may as well be giving me tampon advice. Intellectually, you may think you understand what online (or real life) harassment is, but you can't understand the effect it has on the target.

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia · 3 Min.
2. It's highly personal, everyone deals with this differently. Not every target will choose to react the same way. Responses can range from righteous indignation to disengagement to direct response to trolls, and that's the target's choice, not

So would it be different if a woman said "he's hotter" about a male public figure or would you be just as appalled? Honest question. @wiczipedia

Nope, it'd be no different, but you'll notice that the first line of attack on Sean Spicer, Anthony Scaramucci, or Jay Carney was never "how is his makeup" "does his hair look nice today" or anything to do with their appearance or "hotness."

And FWIW, I got mad when people criticized Sarah Sanders this way too. Sadly this behavior affects all women regardless of political affiliation. Have a nice day.

I've gone with "crap" in the past. IMHO has the requisite vibe of being almost a swear word but not really

We propose several pages of solutions in the report. Most important: introducing incident reports, allowing targets of abuse to group many pieces of content/campaigns together and giving moderators more context than a single tweet/post, reducing the efficacy of malign creativity.

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia · 15 Sek.

We also encourage lawmakers to lead by example and end the gendered rhetoric we see some politicians using in Congress and on campaigns. We also hope VAWA will be reauthorized in the new Congress and include provisions to mitigate online abuse.
